Taking advantage of the iPad as a monitor As the first computer to be able to receive a video signal directly, the iPad offers you a chance to display a video image without needing a second computer to perform the conversion. In addition, it's a great device for still images and for displaying PowerPoint slideshows or PDF documents, as well. To view a video image on the iPad, you must buy a video-displaying accessory device that plugs into the iPad's dock connector or a wireless video receiver and then an Apple TV or Apple TV HD. These devices are normally sold separately as the iPad Dock Connector Adapter Kit and the Apple TV Display Connector Kit. Some organizations, including Starbucks, are using the iPad as a video display for employee training sessions. Another type of digital video receiver that can display video in your iPad is the Apple TV HD. Apple TV HD allows you to play Blu-ray discs, download and play HD video from your computer, and play media from other devices. For more information, visit www.apple.com/apple-tv-hd. The next time you want to see a video from a computer or the Internet, use AirPlay (yes, a third acronym!) to play your video or screencast directly on the iPad. Tap the AirPlay symbol to the right of the Share button on the iPad's screen, and then locate your video or screencast. Tap the AirPlay symbol, and then tap the Video button on the lower-left side of the screen (refer to Figure 4-3).

'I have a patient who was suffering with the same stuff we had at one point, and a disease called Sjogren's syndrome. I realized I was getting fatter than I wanted to be. I can go without food for days and that kind of feeling, but I was really suffering with it. I started thinking about my eating issues a little bit more when I was diagnosed with diabetes. Once I was diagnosed, that's when I looked at what I was eating. I mean, I had a cake right in my kitchen, and I just didn't even think. It's not like that with me anymore.'

Q: Change volume on Alt + Down through Caps Lock on XUbuntu Is there any way to change the volume on Alt + Down (like Windows) through Caps Lock? I would like to record video game action using Xournal, which is able to start video recording when I press Ctrl + Alt + Left. A: I think you can use gsettings to change gucharmap shortcuts like keybindings and others. Set the keybinding to +down (for example): gsettings set

org.gnome.desktop.a11y.keyboard.keybinding "+down"

What's New in the 1click Vaccine Certificate Print Photoshop Action Download?

Disney's new streaming service has been getting a lot of buzz recently, especially after some leaked images showed a deluge of movies, including 2016's Star Wars: The Force Awakens, possibly being pulled from the service. In a sitdown interview with Business Insider, Disney CEO Bob Iger confirms that the service will continue to grow, but that most of the movies available to stream will be a new type of "conventional" content. "We'll have more original movies with a new form of content that we've never seen before," Iger said, but he declined to specify exactly how new the content will be. "There's more to do, and we're always looking to find new ways to leverage our platform," he said. "We'll continue to innovate." Star Wars: The Force Awakens, which racked up over $2 billion in box office receipts, will almost certainly be pulled from the new service, but the company says that won't necessarily mean that it's gone forever. Iger said that Disney will return fans to the galaxy far, far away in some form. "Whether it's direct to consumer, whether it's not, you'll have to ask," he said. "But we're going to do what we think is appropriate to satisfy the fans." Disney will maintain Star Wars exclusivity on the service through 2020. While there's no official word yet on where Disney will recoup its investment in The Force Awakens, Iger said that this doesn't mean it won't make money in the future. "We'll continue to make money," he said, and specifically added that Disney will maintain Star Wars exclusivity on the service through 2020. "We're going to support Star Wars for quite some time," Iger said. Disney will make money off of Star Wars on the streaming service

Disney will also recoup some of its money through the stream by enabling an ad-supported streaming model, although Iger said that he expected this model to be popular with consumers. "We think we've engineered a way for consumers to be comfortable and look forward to the technology continuing to evolve." Iger said that Disney was in talks with several streaming providers, including Sony, Apple, and Amazon, to work out how to get these services off the ground. "We're talking to the different companies now that are doing well, about how to support their businesses," Iger said. "We'll be able to add new things over time, but we really want to
