Your last lines do not even have a CR A: I would delete all that and start again (I am assuming this is what you want to do?) Haven't looked at your code, but my thought is that you have the CR on the line where you echo the line from the array. If you add a 'echo' line right after you append the data to the file, you might see what is going on.

Astronomical-physics, Astronomy, and Theoretical-physics Combinations at Avoinian Astronomical Institute for Ukraine Gail R. Truman Acceptance speech for the BBVA Foundation's Frontiers in Physics Award, presented by Isaac Newton Institute for Mathematical Physics, UCL NATIONAL ASTRONOMICAL INSTITUTE OF THE UKRAINE If a nucleus were placed in the centre of the Earth, its diameter would be around 26,000 km. The same nucleus (by definition a proton) is about 13,000 km in diameter (a hydrogen atom is even smaller, but not that close to the nucleus). The size of the nucleus has been estimated to be around 250 nm, which, at first sight, would make its size seem to be equivalent to the size of a grain of sand. A study of the nucleus and of the conditions surrounding it, however, shows that the nucleus is one of the densest materials in the Universe. A nucleus of 1 kg of matter represents a volume of 725 cm³, while the volume occupied by its particles (its atomic nucleus) is only 2.1 cm³, which is equivalent to 200 kg of sand, a small sieve...

In the not-so-distant past, providers had a number of options when it came to storing patient information. Paper records

Until recently, paper had been the primary means of storing patient information. Files were sorted by patient and then by doctor or patient to determine when the information
