Genuinely comes across as a real 90's adventure game. If you liked last years 1802: LOD, get ready for some serious 110-120 hours of utter frustration that will put a smile on your face. If you liked the tutorials and content from those games, get ready to hear the same stuff in this game. Get ready to be slapped in the face multiple times as you try and figure out the mechanics of this game. Get ready to be absolutely eviscerated in the worst way. Just remember that the setting, characters, and story are the exact same as Prisoner - Mandala of the Multiverse, a game that came out in 1998. If you found that game to be extremely entertaining, you are in for a treat. Additionally, if you have played some of the Broken Sword games, expect to see that style of gameplay carry over to this game. As for gameplay: It's an old school point and click with a gun. There is some FMV that helps out but is obviously not the main focus. The puzzles are ridiculous and there is no solution that I can figure out so far. This could help with the puzzles having multiple solutions though... The story is extremely cheesy but it is also very charming. As the game picks up, it starts to seem like a musical as well. Just like a lot of music from the 90's, it's short and catchy. For anyone who loved music from that era, you will probably enjoy this game, too. As for its future, this game was created by a team of one so it may not be around for too much longer. The game is direct to Mac and Linux at the moment. A Windows version is supposedly in the works but nothing is confirmed as of yet. Overall, this is a game that is unlike most games out there. It's old school, it's real, and it's nothing like another game out there that you may have played. It's everything a game could be and more. If you love classic point and click adventures, you need to give this game a chance. If you are not interested in that style of game, it may be a bit confusing to start off with but it is not impossible to understand. It's got charm and music. It's got a killer soundtrack. It's got puzzles, a bit of comedy, and enough

*The galaxy is huge. There are more than a hundred inhabited planets, all inhabited by different races, civilizations and species. Nearly nine in ten million planets have been discovered, and that's just the small, fertile planets that have been charted. The galaxy isn't a pristine paradise, however, and there are always worlds to discover. Some are inhabited, others are eerily untouched by human hands. When humanity first began looking for worlds to settle, the galaxy was an open book. The first four human colonies settled planets with no problems. The first inhabited world was Yamarti, the second came from the stellar cluster at the heart of the galaxy, known simply as "the Cluster." The first sign of trouble came from the Xendar Empire, a massive enemy race that turned star systems against humanity. The Xendar blocked the main trade routes between the human colonies, brought down the Inara Trade Directorate, stole the United Earth's first colony ship, and detained and forced humanity into a cease-fire. Since then, things have continued to get worse. The Cluster is in turmoil, deadly Xendar ships are regularly crashing into inhabited systems, and Xendar spies regularly come to Earth. The United Earth Government has tried to hold back the Xendar and contained a large portion of the damage their military has wrought. The bulk of their effort has gone into defending the settled worlds and protecting their shipping lanes. Nonetheless, human casualties have been high, and the UEG is now fighting a desperate battle to maintain control of the Cluster. However, without the UEG's assistance, the human population on Earth is only able to call a small part of the galaxy home. As more planets are discovered, the UEG finds itself in a new and unfamiliar situation. It's up to mankind's first interstellar government to find a way to settle the Cluster and bring peace to the galaxy. BULLETDREAMER is a new video game from the creators of the worldwide MMOFPS hit "Star Trek Online", which was one of the top ten most played MMOs from 2009 - 2012, reported by Guinness World Records in 2010, and where many of the former "Star Trek" actors - including Trek's second captain, John Lindley - worked alongside, supporting their community of Star Trek fans. Start game on PC and touch the screen to pick up objects. Stitch is a large, friendly blue alien, who lives on Stitch Island. Stitch is very curious and loves to explore the world. Her friends are Pokey, Nugget, and Pokey's mother. Jabberwock is a wolf-like monster with sharp claws and a long, sharp tail. He must defeat you in order to break your journey, so leave Jabberwock alone. The House of Cool is a great place for Cubby and his friends to hang out. This house is bigger and cooler than any of the others in the jungle. The House of Cool is on a hill, and has a giant door. Jungle Garden is a quiet place where very few creatures live. There are some pigs, a few trees, and one giant mushroom. There is a path that will take you back to the house and the village. Jenny is a young doctor who lives in a hut. There are a few other creatures that live with Jenny, and they are all very friendly to her. She is very determined to help keep the lives of the creatures safe. One day, a storm brought a boat from the sea. A man and his wife were both very kind to the cubs and tried their best to help them. They kindly introduced them to Jenny and built a beautiful house for them to live in. But soon Jenny met with a wolf-like monster that belonged to a nearby village and came to hunt the cubs. Jenny thought it would be a good idea to find a place for the cubs to live near the village, so she found a wonderful place where they could be safe and fed. Where could a cubs be? You will have to use your detective skills to find out. I am currently developing a full game. I have a complete game theme, a prototype game, a prototype website, a prototype map, and a prototype engine. The Prototype Engine will make use of the HTML5, and will allow an easier development process for me. I have been thinking to myself that I should develop mobile games. I have found a good prototype website to help me make the prototype of the game. I have been playing around with Unity3d, and I am getting very good results. I plan to make a website first, then I will move on to the prototype map and prototype game. I hope to have a good game

Idle Wasteland is a 30 to 60 minute solo quest which will provide you with six hours of replayable content in a single experience. You are given a quest in the room 'Say Anything' with the purpose of infiltrating an apartment of an insane and elusive hunter. One of the inner circle. The hunter is, in his own words, looking for the 'classics'. His choice of hunting and his behavior (which is straight from his bloodline) leaves no place for doubt: this man is looking for MSF's, you know, Doctor/Sebastian/Frankenstein. Every hour he unlocks a new object, adds items to his inventory and interacts with the environment. The items he will find are meant to evoke and give hints towards his objectives. You are given a brief scenario and have the option to choose between three approaches: a straightforward assassination approach, a more stealthy approach or a psycho-analysis of the mental state of the hunter, with possible influence of Byron, the Eternal Dreamer. The latter option can become very scary in its final stages. This is from the game designer Theo Jones. Are you team Sebastian? Writing Games Theo Jones (he/him) is a senior games designer and amateur game journalist living and working in Los Angeles. When he is not hard at work on Rich Sommer's Batman animated adaptation, he is writing about video games at his own blog, The Independent G.ke. Jones served in the U.S. Army Field Artillery (between 1994-96), and spent a chunk of his childhood dreaming of being a superhero. When he grew up, he was a reporter for industry trade magazine, Games Vortex, and has since served as editorial director for other gaming websites. In his spare time, he writes screenplays, a novel (The Boy with Ghost Feet) and blogs. He was a panelist at the first IndieCade, in 1998. He attended the 2009 Milken Institute Technology Conference's symposium on "The Life and Death of the Wild West Software Industry," as well as SXSW in 2009. Jones is currently working on his very own West Coast Senior VP of PR, Bookie Revenge. Jones is a contributor to the Critical Gaming Network. "Our 'classics' are how we deal with the problems of the past. We have the option of lying, telling ourselves we were too young at the time to
