We sought to assess the reliability of self-reports of memory difficulties in a general pediatric outpatient clinic and to identify factors related to memory self-reports in this population. We conducted a secondary analysis of a prospective cohort of parents of children, aged 5 to 19 years, enrolled in outpatient clinics at an academic children's hospital. Consecutive participants were interviewed using the West Haven-Yale Multifactorial Memory Scale, a self-report measure of specific memory difficulties, immediately after the clinic visit. Parents were asked to self-report memory difficulties if any issues were brought up during the visit. Confirmatory factor analysis was used to assess reliability of the self-report measure. Factors associated with memory reports were examined using the Student's t-test, chi-square, and Mann-Whitney U-test. The questionnaire was completed by 2,021 families. Factor analysis demonstrated that 3 factors (Vocabulary, Spatial Memory, and General Memory) explained a majority of the variance in the measure. The Kappa coefficient for the general memory factor was poor, with a range of from 0.01 to 0.17. The general memory factor did not differ by age, sex, or ethnicity. Factors associated with reporting difficulties on the measure included a reduced focus on cognition (measured by educational achievement), poor school performance, and alcohol consumption. Now, say the key is objectId, and the maps are associated with that objectId as its key. I want to have a list that would have the list of all the objects, and then I want to have a mutable list of maps that contains the data associated with each object id in that list. I don't know how to put it in a more precise and specific way. Here is what I have tried: List> getObjects(List objectIds){ // How do I construct a list that would contain all the // maps corresponding to the objectIds? List> list = getListOfMaps(objectIds); list.addAll(getListOfMaps(objectIds));
