Kamala Harris (D-CA) that a woman was wrong for accusing Alabama GOP Senate candidate Roy Moore of sexual assault when she was in her teens and he was 32. The interview began with CNN senior legal analyst Jeffrey Toobin agreeing with Camerota that Alabama Democratic Senate nominee Doug Jones would have to ask Moore about the allegations made against him by Beverly Young Nelson. "You know, I think that's a good point," Harris responded. "I have no idea how the election will turn out. But I do know that the history of the United States is built on the belief that if you tell the truth, and if you're willing to take the consequences, and you go to court, you have a right to be heard." "Do you think you have a right to be heard even if you're a minor?" Camerota pressed. "Well, I think you do," Harris replied, before arguing that Moore did not have a constitutional right to sexually harass a minor. "I think a lot of people say that because that was about a state law," she said. 6d1f23a050
